1. These guidelines are established in accordance with Article 7 of the "Implementation Guidelines for Graduate Scholarships at National Chung Hsing University."
2. The Graduate Scholarship Review Committee for this program is composed of members from the program affairs committee, with the director serving as the convener. They are responsible for reviewing applications and allocating scholarships for graduate students in this program.
3. Graduate students in this program, except for those who are employed, may apply for scholarships after completing the registration process each semester by submitting their applications to the program office. Scholarships for new students are available from September to the following July, while for continuing students, they are available from August to the following July. The amounts of scholarships and financial aid for each graduate student in the degree program may be adjusted monthly.
4. Scholarships in this program are divided into two types: merit scholarships and financial aid. The funding for graduate scholarships comes from the university's budget. The amounts of scholarships and financial aid for graduate students in departments, institutes, and degree programs may be adjusted monthly.

- Merit Scholarships: These are awarded for academic research achievements.
 - Financial Aid: Available for the following categories of graduate students:
 - a. Teaching assistants involved in course instruction, with financial aid distributed according to the university's "Implementation Guidelines for Teaching Assistants."
 - b. Administrative assistants involved in administrative work, which are part-time labor positions, with financial aid distributed according to Article 8 of the university's "Implementation Guidelines for Graduate Scholarships."
5. Graduate students who fail to assist with teaching and administrative work or violate university regulations resulting in disciplinary actions shall be restricted from applying for or receiving this scholarship.
 6. These guidelines shall be implemented after being approved by the program affairs committee and subsequently submitted for the president's approval following administrative procedures, with the same process applicable for amendments.
